TALLEYRAND'S LETTER,
(Concluded.)

Both governments ought specially to expect indirect attempts to alienate them more and more from each other. Their prudence will save them from this; and I shall cite but one example of it. You have told Mr. Murray the truth concerning Dr. Logan. However, I perceive that, on all sides, they endeavour to make it believed in America, that we were negociating with him. On the 7th of this month, a very insidious paragraph has been inserted in The Well Informed. [This is the title of a Paris newspaper.] In it they have intimated that, guided by the citizen Thomas Paine, Dr. Logan had applied to the executive directory, as a secret agent. The doctor has made bitter complaints of it to me. He had no need to justify himself respecting a fact, the falsity of which I knew better than any body. But he assured me that having met once only with Thomas Paine, and that in the house of a third person (En maison tierce) he found him really prepossessed against the United States, and assuming an influence which he had neither among them nor among us; and that he had abstained himself from conversing farther with him. After all, to obviate any misunderstanding, I have engaged Dr. Logan to refer to another time, the experiments which he proposed to make respecting agriculture, and to return home. As to Mr. Hichburn of Massachusetts, I was ignorant till this moment, that he was in Europe. Besides, a single word ought to be sufficient. We wish for nothing but justice from the United States. We ask it. We offer it to their government. They may rely on the fidelity of the executive. You will not doubt, citizen, that I approve the communications which your zeal has made you seek for with Mr. Murray, since I enable you to renew them officially.

Health and Fraternity.
(Signed)
CH. MAU. TALLEYRAND.

Certified, conformable to the original in my hands, of which I have given a collated copy to Mr. Murray, 22d Fructidor, 6th year to be communicated to the President of the United States.

PICHON.

EXTRAORDINARY RELATIONS.

At Paris, 7th Vendemaire, 7th year.
The Minister of Foreign Affairs to Citizen Pichon, Secretary of the Legation of the French Republic, near the Batavian Republic.

CITIZEN,

I have successively received your letters of the 22d and 27th Fructidor. They give me reason to be more and more pleased with the course which you have taken in giving me an account of your conversation with Mr. Murray. These conversations, at first merely friendly, have assumed a character, by the approbation which I transmitted to you, on the 11th Fructidor. I do not regret that you have entrusted a copy of my letter to the honour of Mr. Murray. This piece, which was destined only for you alone, contains nothing but what is conformable to the thoughts of the government. I am perfectly satisfied that when explanations are once made, with confidence, between the two cabinets, acrimony will cease; a croud of misunderstandings will disappear, and the ties of friendship will become the closer; as on both sides, they will know the hand which endeavoured to break them.

But I do not conceal from you that your letters of the 20 and 3d Vendemaire, which I received this moment, surprise me very much. Of what Mr. Murray is doubtful still, has been declared very explicitly, even before the message of the President to Congress, of the 3d of last Methidor, was known in France. I had written it to Mr. Gerry, especially, on the 24th Methidor, and the 4th Thermidor. I repeated it to him, before his departure. A whole paragraph of the letter which you have received from me, dated the 11th Fructidor, and the copy of which is in Mr. Murray's collection, is consecrated to developе farther the fixed determination of the French government. From this basis, you were right to advance that any plenipotentiary whom the United States shall send to France, to terminate the differences which are subsisting between the two countries, would be unquestionably received with the marks of respect suitable to the representative of a free, independent and powerful nation.

[We give these words in the original French of Talleyrand, as well as in English, more completely to satisfy the readers of this paper that the demands of the President have been complied with, to the very last tittle."]

[Examiner.]

I cannot, citizen, persuade myself, that the American government, has need of further declarations on our part, to determine itself to undertake, (in order to renew the negociations) the measures which their desire will suggest to them for terminating the differences on pacific terms. If misunderstandings, on both sides have prevented the explanations which were to be expected for that purpose, it must be believed that these misunderstandings once removed, nothing for the future will oppose any obstacle to the mutual dispositions.

The instructions of the President to his envoys at Paris, of which I have had a knowledge only by the copy which Mr. Murray has given you of them, and which I have received on the 21st Messidor, announce, if they contain all the thoughts of the American government, dispositions which have only added to those which the directory have always possessed, and notwithstanding the father acts of the government, the provoking and almost hostile measures to which they have carried themselves, the directory have shewn that they persisted in the sentiments which are contained both in my correspondence with Mr. Gerry, and in the letter which I wrote to you on the 11th Fructidor; and which I have repeated above, in a most explicit manner. Carry, therefore, citizen, to Mr. Murray these positive expressions in order to convince him of our sincerity, and engage him to transmit them to his government.

I presume, citizen, that this letter will find you at the Hague. If otherwise, I ask that it should be sent back to you at Paris.

Health and fraternity,
(Signed)
CH. MAU. TALLEYRAND.

Certified conformable to the original, given to Mr Murray, 16th Vendemaire, 7th year, after having taken a collated copy of it, in order that the said original might be communicated to the President of the United States.
At Paris, 23d Ventose, 7th year.
(Signed) L. A. PICHON.

Arrete of the 28th Ventose, 7th year.

The executive directory, reviewing their arrete of the 12th Ventose, 5th year, concerning navigation of neutral vessels, loaded with merchandises, belonging to enemies of the republic, and the trial of the disputes concerning the validity of the maritime prizes; and considering that the 4th article of that arrete, in what relates to the rolls of equipage, with which neutral vessels ought to be provided, has given rise to abusive interpretations, concerning the rolls of equipages of American vessels and that it is urgent to put an end to the shackles which result from it with respect to the navigation of the vessels of that nation:

After having heard the minister of foreign relations, and of justice, they declare that, by the 4th article of the said arretes, they have not meant that the navigation of American vessels, with regard to the forms of their rolls of equipage, should be subject to any other conditions than those which are imposed upon all neutrals by the 12th article of the regulation of 1744, and by the 9th article of the 20th of July 1788.

The ministers of justice, and marine are each, in what concerns them, charged with the execution of the present arrete, which shall be inserted in the bulletin of the laws.

From the Baltimore Federal Gazette.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of respectability in Richmond, (Virg:) to his friend here, dated Sept: 7.

"It is rumoured among the French party here, that letters from Talleyrand to our government, through the channel of Mr. Murray, communicated in confidence to the senate at their last session, will appear before the public in a few days. It appears to be their design to publish them first to the northward, as the Examiner is too near. But let them appear where they may, rest assured that they came through the channel of a senator. You know whom I mean.

"They say the President enjoined secrecy on the senate in laying before them the above papers, fearing, that as they contained the most pacific overtures, no less than the cessation of depredations, an indemnification for the losses of our merchants, and honorable amends for the indignities shewn our envoys; they would revive in the people their old sentiments of gratitude for French generosity. I hope the bishop makes not pacific assurances only; and I'll stand for the fear of the president, as well as the people's gratitude."

FROM THE VIRGINIA FEDERALIST.

IN the Examiner, on Friday last (a Democratic paper published in Virginia) that Editor has presented to the public two letters, written by Talleyrand, Secretary of Foreign Affairs for France, to Mr. Pichon, then employed in the service of that nation at the Hague, of which letters, a copy of the first, and the original second, are stated to have been delivered to Mr. Murray, and to be transmitted to the President of the United States,

The Examiner anticipates the impression, this publication must make on the minds of Unfrenchified Americans; he is aware of the enquiries which will be made concerning the channel through which he has received these papers, and of the unfavorable suspicions respecting himself, which the present dark appearance of this transaction must inevitably excite; yet he has not been pleased to remove the one or to satisfy the other. All information is withheld from the public, but that which the face of the papers, and their contents will furnish.—To this evidence then we will resort.

The last letter (if we understand rightly the French Calender, which alone the Examiner has thought proper to use) was dated 28th of September, 1798. Both letters are certified by Pichon in Paris on the 13th March, 1799. Not content with authenticating them he certifies, that he had delivered a copy of the first to Mr. Murray in September and the original second, in October, 1798, "to be communicated to the President of the U. States," The papers appear to have been received in the French language.

From these facts, it can only be referred, that the copies published in the Examiner, and certified by Pichon in March last, were transmitted to America by the agents of the French government, unsolicited—or, on the application of some persons in the United States. In either event, they were designed for publication, as apparent from the declaration of the certificate, that they had been delivered to Mr. Murray, "to be communicated to the President of the United States."

Such being the fact, our fellow-citizens ought to reflect seriously on the motives that could induce this transaction.

Why is a correspondence kept up between the French government and certain printers of America, while that nation is openly practising so much hostility against us?

What effect is intended by this extraordinary procedure, or what effect can be produced by it? What can be intended by France but to divide the people from the government—a government created by the people, and guided by the will of the majority?

In such a state of things, to divide the people from the government, is to divide them between themselves. It is to sever the minority from the majority, and to attach that minority to a foreign hostile nation. Success in such an effort, destroys all national independence! Weakness, degradation, universal contempt, and civil war, can only thus be produced. By any other people than Americans, so gross an attempt to use them as instruments of their own ruin, would be received with general indignation. By Americans such an attempt made by any other government than that of France, would excite a national spirit, and a national sentiment, which would effectually secure us from its pernicious effects, and prevent its repetition. But France is in the habit of thus practising upon our devotion to her, and we seem still in the habit of submitting to it. With respect to France, we cannot yet learn to take and to hold our equal station among the people of the earth.—France is still permitted to use us as the instrument of self degradation, and to execute in the interior of our country, those humiliating plans, which are so totally subversive of national independence.

Thus Genet was instructed to endeavor to effect the views of France with the people, if he should fail with the government, and therefore Genet threatened to appeal from the government to the people.

That Adet on the event of the presidential election made an actual appeal to the people. Thus Barras, the president of the Directory of France, requested our minister, Mr. Munroe, to be the bearer of his assurances of esteem for the people and execration of the government of the United States.

Thus Talleyrand, when there was no longer a minister in our country, to divide and intrigue among the people, transmitted to one of his creatures here, for publication, before the President himself had received it, an official letter, replete with the most degrading invective, and the most unfounded accusation against the American government. The letters now published, are a continuation of the same system. They are published at a time, when we know that the ministers of the United States are once more about to sail for France, in order to offer up, yet again, our humble supplications, to the haughty rulers of that ambitious nation. They are published to manifest the amicable temper of France, at a time when she still prosecutes, with all the means she possesses, an inveterate war against us. No repeal of her hostile acts is even expected. It is enough that she will abate so much from her former vigour, as to condescend to hear ours prayers!

Americans! have you the feelings of men, and of freemen about you? If you have—can those feeling sleep under such indignities?

But if you are not alive to national character, when that character is insulted by France, if you lose all self respect the instant France commands it to disappear—at least attend to the dictates of your own experience, and benefit yourselves from the lessons it has given.

What has changed the tone of France? Why is she now willing to renew that diplomatic intercourse, which she herself broke off? Why is she now willing to receive any minister from the United States, although she formerly asserted the right of a master, in selecting from what party, the persons deputed to her should be chosen? What, we again ask, has produced this change in the French Government?

When Mr. Adet suspended his functions, as Minister to the United States, the efforts of our government to preserve a good understanding with France, were incessant; but Mr. Adet was induced to believe that the people were prepared to take part with France against themselves.

When General Pickney was deputed to France, he carried with him the most amicable dispositions, and conciliatory propositions from America; but with a haughtiness unexampled among nations, France refused to receive, or to hear him.

When after this, three Envoys Extraordinary were deputed with instructions which you have seen, and which all must approve.—France disdainfully rejected them, and insisted, as a preliminary to all discussion, that, they should surrender the best interests of their country, and make you a tributary people!

When your Envoys addressed them in the most soothing and conciliatory style, nothing was returned but insult to you and your Government. At the same period laws and decrees were passed, which subjected your property to universal plunder, and you were in every respect treated as enemies,

America at length acted as a nation—she acted as if the term of her humility was past, and her cup of submission exhausted. She firmly declared, that she would supplicate no longer, and she armed in her own defence.

Although the same party who had from the commencement arranged themselves on the side of France, opposed these measures, and declared that they would draw on us the vengence of that mighty nation, up to which they still seem to look with such trembling awe, yet the great majority of the people with the government at their head, preserved a firm and manly countenance, and the language of France was immediately changed.

They are now willing to receive our ministers, and to treat of peace—and they will continue to be willing if we do not again pursuade them that we prefer the government of France to our own.

If then peace be our object, we must adhere to our own government, and receive with indignant frowns, those insidious attempts to divide us.

ARMY OF BUONAPARTE.

The following are extracts of letters from a gentleman on board the Tigre, off Acre, to his friend at Smyrna, the authenticity of which may be depended upon:

"Acre, May 2, 1799.

"Capt Davis not having been finally dispatched yesterday, I have time to add, that Buonaparte made last night a fourth attempt to storm the town, and he was repulsed with great loss on the breach and in the ditches; besides the havock the fire from the Tigre must have made in his trenches and lines. I hope to have soon the pleasure of informing you of his total expulsion from before the town. The bearer of this, capt. Davis, will give you every detail about this siege, from the circumstances and singularity of the personages employed pro and con, it will form an epoch in the history of the present war. When you write to England, I request you will acquaint my friends that I am still among the living, and as well as it is possible to be in the midst of fire, sword, shot, shells, and the plague, now unknown, except in the French camp."

"The inclosed packet was to have gone by captain Davis, but the Fortune having been detached on other services, it has since remained by me until this opportunity. I am happy to inform you that Buonaparte is not yet in possession of Acre.—He has made even desperate attempts to take it by storm, in all of which he has been repulsed with great slaughter. He has lost eight generals, more than eighty of his best officers, all his guides, the greater part of his carbineers, grenadiers, and most of his artillery—in all, upwards of 4000 men, the flower of his army. Nothing can surpass the bravery of the Turks in the four last attempts; they boldly rushed in upon the republican bayonets, sabre in hand, cutting to pieces every one who bore arms against them, with but little loss to themselves, as the French had never time to fire more than one round before they closed with them. This kind of defence has been enforced at the desire of sir Sidney, who with his friend, captain Miller, are constantly on shore to cheer the garrison, and direct and execute every measure of defence and attack. I hope soon to be able to give you a more detailed account of our operations now in agitation, which if they do not effectuate the total overthrow of the enemy, will place them in a very bad situation. Buonaparte has lost all his popularity and the confidence of his troops. They will all soon be destroyed one way or another, for the princes of the mountains, his only friends in this country, are all come over to us, and have actually withdrawn all supplies from him."

LITCHFIELD, SEPTEMBER 4.

Criminal prosecutions, at August term of the hon. Superior Court.

Gideon Washburn, an old man of 83 years, was found guilty on an indictment for Bestiality, and received sentence of death on Friday last, to be executed on the 15th November next, betwixt the hours of ten in the morning and three in the afternoon. Pierpont Edwards, and John Allen, Esquires, were council for the delinquent, and the hon. Uriah Tracy, attorney for the state, and Daniel W. Lewis, Esq. argued the cause against the criminal. The solemn manner of arraignment, by Mr. Walcott, the clerk, and the zeal and eloquence of the advocates, wrought upon a very crouded house with irresistible effect; nor were the remarks of Chief Justice Root, and the ceremony of passing sentence, less impressive. A crime of this debasing nature, confined to a single fact, is degrading man below the beasts which perish; but poor human nature under the unparalleled circumstances of this most aggravated of all possible cases, suffers by a comparison with the most beastly monsters—the conviction being substantiated on the proof of four reputable witnesses, to six various facts, from four years back to within the recent period of 3 months!

PHILADELPHIA, SEPTEMBER 25.

The sensible variation which has lately taken place in the weather, has naturally occasioned a temporary increase of mortality. This circumstance, however, is no indication of the progress of disease, but rather a proof that at the approach of cool weather, it will be entirely extinguished. It is a fact which we announce with high satisfaction, and upon the best authority, that although the number of deaths have experienced a partial increase, in consequence of a frigid atmosphere, the number of new cases have diminished in more than an equal proportion.

We mention this to rectify the public opinion, which, in the course of this week, has been misled by various and groundless alarms.

NEWS FROM FRANCE.

From a friend in Europe, by an arrival at New-York, I have received files of several Paris papers from the 11th Messidor to the 6th Thermidor; and among which are the Ami des Loix, the Rectadar, and the Patriote Francais, the latter of which, in the true fanatical cant of the day, bears the following inscriptions in striking characters at its head:

"On the 9th Floreal, at 9 o'clock in the evening, the Austrian government caused to be assinated by its troops, the French plenipotentiaries charged by the directory to negociate a peace at Rastadt."

War and death to the English government and the house of Austria!

VENGEANCE! VENGEANCE.

It is printed in the Rue d'Enfer.

We give to-day an hasty abstract of the principle articles contained in these Gazettes, reserving the details for succeeding papers.

It appears that royalism is every where directing assassinations against the republicans. "The council of five hundred, considering that at the moment when the legislators are occupied in offering to the republicans a guarantee against the assassinations which royalism directs against them, it is not less important to open the eyes of the universality of the French people upon their civil dissentions, that their is urgency." The council, after having declared urgency, proceeded to decree an address, that "bitter civil dissentions have already sprung up afresh in the departments of the west and the south, threatening to extend their ravages to other parts of the republic." In the mean while bands of royal assassins shew themselves in divers departments, and attack the republicans."

In the council of five hundred, on the 1st Thermidor, Talot, by a motion of order, denounced an intention, (which he charges to royalists) of reassembling a national convention. A committee was appointed to make a law against such organization.

The commune of St. Claude has been consumed, and the wretched inhabitants, reduced to a state of nakedness, apply to the council of ancients for succor. Sent to the Directory.

Decomberouse, in the Council of Ancients, presented an address signed by a great number of the citizens of Grenoble, who demand that the ex-directors be bro't to judgment. They demand also, that the council revile, and cause to be executed the laws providing succors to the families of the defenders of the country.

The republicans of Marseilles and of Toulouse felicitate the council upon the energy it has assumed, and demand the punishment of the ex-directors.

Reinhard, minister plenipotentiary in Switzerland, succeeds Talleyrand as minister of exterior relations.

Robert Lindet takes the place of Ramel the financier.

The appointement of Lambrechts to the ministry of justice is revoked, and Cambaceres, ex-conventionalist, is appointed to succeed him.

The Piedmontese, the Swils, heretofore in the service of the king of Sardinia, the Poles, Cisalpines, &c. with the army of Italy, were in the course of the last winter united to the French army. All that remain of those troops, it appears by a message of the directory to the councils, are suffering under privations of every kind, at Vute Franche, Chambery, Grenoble, &c. and their situation becoming daily more painful.

It appears by a letter of Bernadotte, (the new war minister) to the generals in chief of all the armies, that the old soldiers not only treat the young conscripts with great contempt, but actually beat them on their arrival at the armies.

The municipality of Amiens denounces many incendiary writings distributed by the royalists.

The conscripts of the department of Cher, are stated to have deserted en masse.

The head-quarters of Massena's army were at Hunnigen.

A body of 60,000 Russians is assembling in Poland.

It was with the utmost difficulty that the savages who surrendered in the citadel of Turin, were preserved from popular fury. Many of them fell victims to the rage of the mob.

We regret to find that a chief of the coupe tetes, named Travot, has by stratagem made prisoners 4 generals of Chouans. They are, the chevalier de Vezins, Dupineau, Gourreau, and Blouin, emigrants.

The general Vimeux has been authorized by the central administration of Maine and Loire, to cause to be disarmed the inhabitants of those communes which have furnished troops to reinforce the Chouans.

The dey of Algiers, at the intercession of Messieurs Barry and Buschac, has set at liberty the French who had been some months imprisoned there.

The department of the Upper Loire is infested by numerous troops of brigands. One of these on the 5th Messidor, attacked the gen d'armes of St. Didier and Nonistrol, and gained some advantages over them.

The department of Vaucluse is the prey of brigandage. Precautions are taking, that the Chouans who desolate the department of the Var, may not penetrate into the department of Gard. Barrere is recalled.

Cambe invei ghs against the rich men, and proposes that the jury be instructed to attend, as a principal object to the attainting of men gorged with the public fortune, and those who by, the effects of the revolution, have known how to procure themselves rapid and scandalous fortunes.

In the sitting of the council of ancients, 2d Thermidor, the secretary read a crowd of addresses, all calling down vengeance upon the triumvirs.

3d Thermidor. The citizens of Sallies, (lower Pyrennees) denounce the representative Casenave as having been one of the most ardent agents of the triumvirate and of having tyrannized that department in quality of central commissary.

A member. There is not a patriot more energetic than Casenave.

Laffinant was not entirely of opinion with this speaker; he believed the course followed by Casenave, in that department was by no means favorable to the patriots. He wished to speak further, but the council cut short these debates by proceeding to the order of the day.

The citizen Morla, engineer, denounces Merlin, of Thionville, as an dilapidator of the public fortune. Sent to the directory.

The whole of the department of Ardeche is in insurrection, and the power and authority of the government set at defiance.

Serious troubles agitate the department of Deux Sures, where the royalists, with the white banner of France, march in force from commune to commune cutting down the trees of liberty and demolishing the republican emblems.

Quinette, ex-conventionalist, replaces Francois de Neufchateau as minister of the interior.

Bourdon, commissary of the marine at Antwerp, is appointed to succeed Bruix, as minister of marine.

A RACE!

From the SPORTING MAGAZINE.

THE bucks had dined, and deep in council sat,
Their wine was brilliant, but their wit grew flat:
Up starts his Lordship, to the window flies,
And lo! "A race!—a race!" in rapture cries;
"Where?" quoth Sir John, "Why see the drops of rain
"Start from the summit of the chrystal pane—
"A thousand pounds! which drop the nimblest force,
"Performs its current down the slippery course!"
The bets were fix'd—in dire suspence they wait
For victory, pendant on the nod of fate,
Now down the lash, unconscious of the price,
The bubbles roll—like pearls from Chloe's eyes.
But ah! the glittering charms of life are short!
How oft two jostling steeds have spoil'd the sport,
Lo! thus attraction, by coercive laws,
Th' approaching drops into one bubble draws—
Each curs'd his fate, that thus their project cross'd;
How hard their lot, who neither won nor lost!
